READING ALONE
ENLIVENS MARKETIn Buying Movement Stock
Went Above 119.

MARKET GENERALLY HEAVY

Western Houses Sold Railroad Stocks.
St. Paul Strong Feature—Bonds
Unchanged.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Leaving out the dealings in Reading, the tone of the market has been heavy today. Western houses were sellers on balance of the railroad list, having favored a reaction for some days.

Pittsburg and Philadelphia houses are not buying the Steel stocks on balance, and do not seem at present to be favoring any general bullish speculation.

At the opening of the stock market, sales of Reading were half higher. Amalgamated Copper was up 1/4. For the most part the international list was heavy, with Atchafalpa and Union Pacific down a minimum of 1/4, and the average down about 1/4. Prices, however, rallied irregularly almost immediately.

Practically all the speculative interest in the stock market has been attracted to Reading. There were two separate movements, and the buying finally carried the stock above 119.

Next to Reading, St. Paul was perhaps the strongest feature at 3/4 advance. London, in the first hour, bought Reading, but sold all the other international stocks, the sales exceeding the purchases by about 15,000 shares. Government bonds unchanged; other bonds firm.

THOMAS E. WAGGAMAN,
Indicted Today by the Grand Jury on a Charge of Embezzlement.

Waggaman Indicted,
Embezzlement Charged

Federal Grand Jury Today Returns a True Bill Against Former Washington Capitalist—Must Now Stand Trial.

Thomas E. Waggaman was today indicted by the grand jury for the embezzlement of $5,000 of the money of Mary Ellen French, wife of Harry, and the Little Sisters of the Poor.

The indictment is based on the circumstances developed in a cause in equity in the local courts, in which Charles R. Morgan, trustee, was complainant, against Mary Ellen French, and others.

It is stated in the indictment Waggaman was a trustee under the will of Adelle R. French, and that he was substituted as trustee under her will in place of Charles R. Morgan.

On June 27, 1934, it is alleged that Waggaman, in the capacity of trustee, came into the possession of $5,000 belonging to Mary L. French, Adelle R. French, and the Little Sisters of the Poor.

On the date mentioned, Waggaman fraudulently converted and appropriated the money for his own use and embezzled it.

NOTE IN OLD CAN
LED TO FORTUNEScribbled in Fun, It Made
Miner Wealthy.

NOW WEDDING MAY RESULT

Romance of Escapade in Life of Nebraska Girl in Mountains of Utah.

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 19.—A generous block of stock in rich gold mine and a prospective husband are what Miss Marion McNamara has thus far got from a little note which she hastily scribbled in pencil and buried up in the mountains of Utah several years ago.

Three or four years ago she was visiting friends in Park City, Utah. One day they took her up in the mountains for an outing.

"Miss McNamara, you are standing directly over a body of a very rich ore," said one of the young lady's friends playfully.

"Oh, do you think so?" she laughingly asked. "Well, then," she continued, "I'll mark the spot."

Buries Note on Mountain.

Accordingly, tearing a leaf from her notebook she scribbled upon it in pencil this note:

"Whoever works this mine will please remember me with a share and name the mine Marion."

"MARION McNAMARA," "Omaha, Neb."

This note she put in an old powder can which she was lying at her feet and, digging a hole in the ground, buried it. She returned to her home in Omaha a few days later and forgot all about the incident.

Recently Richard Percell, a miner from Montana, with a partner, was prospecting in the mountains near Park City. He stuck his pick in the ground at the spot where the Omaha young lady's friends had taken her for an outing and unearthed the old powder can. He read the note.

"I believe I shall find ore here," said he to his partner. "I believe that young lady has pointed the way to fortune."

He continued to dig. The next day he was overjoyed to find gold. The find was a rich one. It has made him wealthy.

Naturally enough Percell's thoughts reverted to the young lady who had written the note and buried it. He admits that but for the note he would not have made the find.

May Result in Wedding.

In his gratitude he wrote Miss McNamara, telling her of how he had found the note and of the result. He told her he had named the mine the Marion, that she should have a share in it, and that he should soon come to Omaha to see her.

"I never gave the note a thought after burying it till I received word that it had led to the discovery of gold," said Miss McNamara. "I wrote it and buried it simply in a spirit of fun. It is all very strange and romantic."

The fortunate Montana miner to whom she pointed the way to riches is young, good looking and unmarried. It is regarded as likely that besides a share in the gold mine he may win a wife and share in the wealth of the mine.

PRICELESS GOLD PLATE.

King Edward is the owner of a vast store of almost priceless gold plate, the accumulated treasure of successive sovereigns. It is stored in Windsor Castle, but is brought to London, carefully guarded by the secret service.

These treasures are equaled only by those of the winter palace in St. Petersburg.
